Secretary John Laird on USDA Announcement of Regional Climate Hubs

SACRAMENTO, Calif. – California Natural Resources Secretary John Laird today issued the following statement on the U.S. Department of Agriculture’s creation of Regional Hubs for Risk Adaptation and Mitigation to Climate Change:

“We are pleased to hear that Davis, California was selected as one of the first-ever regional sub hubs that will deliver science-based knowledge and practical information to farmers, ranchers and forestland owners. The Davis sub hub will not only add value to federal research efforts on climate change impacts to crops and forests, it will offer new opportunities for collaboration with California’s universities, state and local governments, and private-sector.”
