

Thank you for sharing your climate adaptation project, policy, or program with the California Natural Resources Agency's Climate Team! We are excited to learn from your experience and shine a spotlight on your community's work in the August Sneak Peek Edition to Safeguarding California 2017. Although we have just begun collecting stories for the Sneak Peek Edition, we have learned about so many ways Californians are already preparing for changes in our climate. We have learned about well loan programs in the drought-stricken communities of the Central Valley, bus shelters in hot areas being equipped with drinking stations, and new parks in historically underserved neighborhoods. Together, we can create strong, healthy, and safe communities to protect our families' health, and ensure a prosperous California for future generations to come.

In order to inspire Californians with your work, we ask that you send answers to the questions below to Sam.Diaz@Resources.ca.gov.

What do we need to know for the Sneak Peek Edition?
	Please identify what issue related to climate change your community perceives and is addressing with the project.
	Please share a brief description of your project, policy or program. If possible, include the location, funding source(s), and how you overcame any challenges you encountered.
	How does your project, policy or program create and/or strengthen community relationships? How does it build capacity around climate adaptation amongst community members?
	Please provide quotes and pictures you would like to see featured in the Sneak Peek Edition.

What's Next?

Sam Diaz will contact you with any follow-up questions. As we collect more projects and stories from Californians, we will draft the Sneak Peek Edition. Be on the lookout for a draft version in late July 2016. You will receive the final version in August 2016.

Please share widely! With your friends, colleagues, elected officials! We need everyone to be part of this opportunity!
