Background:

Throughout the state, 65 projects will be funded through the California Natural Resources Agency's Youth Community Access Grant Program to expand access to cultural and natural resources for youth in underserved communities, totaling over $14 million. 100% of all grant funding will support public, educational, job training, and outreach programs and small capital asset projects located in and providing benefit to underserved and low-income communities across California. These investments will provide opportunities for California youth to access the outdoors, through experiential agricultural training, outdoor wellness summits, transportation to parks and greenspace, environmental education and other access-oriented activities.
