B. Background

In February 2017, following a series of historic rain events, a crack in the primary spillway precipitated public discussions on proper response should Oroville Dam collapse or the emergency spillway fail. Due to the damage to the spillway and subsequent public safety declarations, nearly 200,000 residents near Oroville Dam evacuated their homes to safer ground.

Now, having repaired the main spillway and the adjacent emergency spillway, the state of California is assessing the future needs of the 50-year-old complex and the many appurtenances required for the functioning of the State Water Project.

Existing law requires the California Department of Water Resources to supervise the maintenance and operation of dams and reservoirs in California as necessary to safeguard life and property. Under existing law, the Department of Water Resources operates the State Water Project, composed of the state water facilities, including the Oroville Dam.

In 2018, Senate Bill 955 was signed into law establishing an independent entity, the Citizens Advisory Commission, or “commission”, within the California Natural Resources Agency, related to the Oroville Dam or “dam”, including its appurtenant structures, the Feather River Fish Hatchery, and the Oroville-Thermalito Complex. Senate Bill 955 provided many of the details regarding the purpose and intended functioning of the commission. These details are spelled out in the sections below.

The Oroville Dam Citizens Advisory Commission is modeled on the successful and collaborative Sacramento River Forum, which continues to promote and coordinate restoration activities along the Sacramento River and originally evolved from 1986 State of California legislation SB 1086 (Nielsen). Similar to the Sacramento River Forum, the current effort is intended to be cooperative in nature and designed to ensure that multiple stakeholder perspectives and interests are informing decision-making at Oroville Dam.

While the Citizens Advisory Commission is an independent entity and will operate based on its own unique goals and the directions set forth in the law, the commission is not functioning in a vacuum. For instance, the Oroville Dam Safety Comprehensive Needs Assessment (CNA) is evaluating options for increasing long-term infrastructural and operational resilience of the Oroville facilities. Two organizing bodies participate and offer feedback in that process: Independent Review Board (IRB) and a community-based Ad Hoc Group (AHG), the latter of which has some overlap regarding member representation on the Oroville Dam Citizens Advisory Commission. The Citizens Advisory Commission will coordinate with these and other advisory bodies, including the Oroville Recreation Advisory Committee (ORAC), as needed to meet its objectives.

C. Funding

The commission is being run through the California Natural Resources Agency. The commission may, as directed by the legislation, receive in-kind assistance or funds, or both, from public and private sources. These funds are available to the commission upon appropriation by the Legislature.

5. The commission is advisory only and has no authority to make regulations or rules to bind operations at the dam.
6. The commission shall have volunteers responsible for reviewing and approving commission meeting summaries.

G. Cooperation from California State Agencies

State Agencies shall do all of the following for the commission:

1. Provide onsite tours of the dam and its grounds. The power of visitation specified in this section shall not extend to a situation where institutional or structural security would be jeopardized.
